

tale of time
(words and music Lee Maddeford)

mother takes her child carresses all the fears away and sings of ancient time and the world turns the sun will rise on a field of broken glass reflections of a thousand years a thousand drops of tears

the moon will rise again

REFRAIN
and the tale of time is brought down through the ages in our mind
is passed from fathers fathers to their sons and the silence of a life can be seen inside the dawn fathers takes his son and walks upon the forest floor and talks of younger days

and the world turns
the moon will rise on a

ocean filled with love the love of years that have come and gone with the rising of the tide
